

FLYERS ARE FORCED TO LAND

President Says Veterans' Bill Is Bad Legislation

Does Not Think Country Will Support Relief Measure

APPROVED 66 TO SIX

American Medical Group Points In Criticism of Passage

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP)—While house republican leaders pondered what to do, President Hoover Tuesday called the World war veterans relief bill "just bad legislation."

The bill, approved 66 to 6 by the senate Monday, was being returned to the house while the president denounced it to newspaper correspondents standing in his office. A caucus of republican representatives was called for Tuesday night, at which an effort will be made to offer a substitute measure.

"I do not believe the country will support this bill," said Hoover.

The presidential attack emphasized the opposition to the bill expressed in a letter to the senate submitted by the American Medical Association and the American Medical Group, and voiced by Secretary of the Veterans Bureau, the treasury secretary warned that the expenditures entailed would require increased taxes next year.

Hines reiterated in a statement Tuesday the word he had given the president that the measure, in the form approved by the house, would add directly to the present $311,000,000 annual expenditures for World war veterans by $181,000,000 for the first year and increasing annually to a possible additional $400,000,000 would be reached.

Answering statements in the senate debate which questioned his figures, Hines said a check showed the original estimates were conservative. He expressed the opinion "that the bill as passed by the senate will cost even more."

PHYSICIANS BACK HOOVER

DETROIT, June 25.—The American Medical Association Tuesday came to the support of President Hoover in his opposition to the liberalized World war veterans pension bill.

In a resolution passed in the house of delegates, the bill was criticized as "without basis in the science and art of medicine."

The resolution attacked the provisions of the bill enlarging hospital facilities at the command of the veterans bureau as "unsound and unsanitary in character." The duty of providing medical care for veterans, it said, is the duty of the federal government, the resolution said. The cash allowance scheme for hospitalized veterans also was criticized as calculated to bring into the hospitals at the command of the veterans bureau patients who could be better and more economically treated as ambulatory patients.

PASSENGER PLANES AND HANGAR BURNS

Estimated Damage of More Than Two Million Dollars

CHICAGO, June 25.—(AP)—Twelve passenger planes were destroyed and damage to the hangars at the municipal airport here of more than $2,000,000 in a early morning fire.

The hangars were being used by the Universal Air corporation lines, and the Grey Goose lines.

Fire broke out following an explosion. A watchman said he saw a spark leap across the darkness, the explosion then followed. Before an alarm could be given the entire building was aflame.

Nolan's sentence was affirmed by the Arkansas Supreme Court three weeks ago. Two companions, given death sentences in connection with the slayings, were electrocuted several months ago.

Byrd Congratulates Lindy on Heir

Railroad Employee Tortured, Killed

Body of Yellville Bridge Foreman Found Near Crane, Mo.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 25.—(AP)—Officials and physicians who viewed the body of B. E. Ingram, 30, Missouri Pacific bridge foreman of Yellville, Ark., found slain near Crane, Mo., late Tuesday, expressed the opinion he had been tortured and then killed.

Ingram had been dead about eight hours before his body was found, physicians said. Holes were found burned in his arms and officers said a suit of underwear had been wound tightly about his neck, apparently a part of the torture scheme.

Bullets had been fired through his wrists and his head backed and cut at last finally crushed.

The chief detectives of the Missouri Pacific Lines was coming from St. Louis tonight to conduct an investigation.

July 5 Last Day To Pay Poll Tax

1929 Receipts Will Not Entitle Holders to Vote in Primary

All persons who expect to vote in the Democratic primary August 12 and who do not have a poll tax receipt issued this year for 1929 taxes, must procure such a tax receipt on or before July 5. Attorney General Hal L. Norwood has just ruled.

Poll tax receipts issued in 1929 will not entitle the holder to vote in the August primary, he said. Two methods of obtaining current poll tax receipts are open to those who failed to assess at the regular assessing time in 1929. Both methods involve a delinquent assessment which carries a penalty of $1 for failing to assess at the proper time, and the sheriff may add a penalty of 25 cents for failure to pay the tax at the time prescribed for paying taxes without penalty.

A delinquent assessment may be made with either the county clerk or the county tax assessor on or before Friday, July 5, since Friday, ordinarily the last day for assessing delinquent, falls on July 4 this year. The tax may be paid up to the following Saturday, July 5.

The attorney general pointed out that the Supreme Court has ruled that a poll tax receipt obtained without the holder having assessed in the manner prescribed by law does not entitle the holder to vote.

Special poll tax receipts, issued last year under authority of an opinion from the attorney general to permit holders to obtain automobile license tags and other licenses and permits, do not entitle the holder to vote. The life of such receipts expired last January and they will not be issued again this year.

Texas Farmers Stage Hunt for Lion

A score of Bowie county farmers rested on their arms Monday after a hunt Sunday for a large lion reported to be prowling through the Whaley farm area about 16 miles northwest of Texarkana.

Where the lion came from and of what species it is have not been established but tales of its depredations continue to pour in daily.

A fisherman who viewed the animal described it as a huge beast with a long mane. Several have seen it from afar but none has been able to get within shooting distance.

The unsuccessful hunt Sunday was staged after farmers found that the lion had killed a yearling owned by the Whaley corporation during Saturday night. It also is reported to have slain stock owned by Jim Smith.

Reports of the prowling of the lion have leaked in for three weeks but at first were given little credence. The with dogs and guns.

New Through Road Brings Shreveport Within 88 Miles

Continuous Gravel Highway Through Lewisville to Shreveport

REDUCED 25 MILES

Eliminates Texarkana For Traffic to Hot Springs This Summer

A new direct highway is now open between Hope and Shreveport reducing the distance between these cities from 113 miles to only 88 miles.

The new connection was established last week with the completion of Louisiana state road No. 10 from Bradley south. Arkansas had previously completed her state road No. 29 from Hope through Lewisville to below Bradley, and the junction of the two state systems now makes a complete highway from Hope to Shreveport.

The approximate distance is 52 miles from Hope to the Arkansas-Louisiana line, just below Bradley, and 36 miles from that point to Shreveport, a total distance of 88 miles.

This cuts off 25 miles from the best previous route, Hope to Texarkana to Shreveport, distances on this road being 34 miles Hope to Texarkana, and 79 miles Texarkana to Shreveport, a total of 113 miles.

Heavy through traffic is expected to use the new Hope-Lewisville-Shreveport route, as it brings Hot Springs, one of the most famous vacation spots in America, 25 miles closer to the Louisiana city.

North Louisiana traffic which has been traveling to Texarkana and thence doubling east to get to Hot Springs will now in all probability use the direct route through Lewisville and Hope. The Hope-Lewisville road is the best gravel highway in this section, and the same quality road is continued to Bradley, and through the Louisiana parishes into Shreveport.

Gasoline Supply Running Too Short To Continue Flight

Radio Saves Men From Possible Disaster In Fog

HARBOR GRACE, New Foundland, June 25.—(AP)—Transatlantic fliers flying the Southern Cross landed here and immediately began to make plans for the continuation of their journey, which is from Ireland to New York, from New York they plan to fly to San Francisco. This will make the all around the world flight, the Southern Cross, as it has previously made a successful flight from San Francisco to Australia and then to England.

They plan to leave for New York at daybreak Thursday for the trip to New York. The fliers had encountered almost perfect weather conditions on their trip, until they neared the New Foundland coast. Here they ran into a heavy fog. They flew blindly in the darkness and would have crashed had it not been for the radio.

In Good Spirits

Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith, J. W. Stannage, M. E. Van Dyke, and Captain J. D. Saul were all in good condition and in excellent spirits when the landing was made. They talked only briefly about the great danger they had encountered.

Charles Kingsford-Smith credited the radio with having saved him and his three companions. He said a shortage of gasoline would have prevented him from reaching New York, the original goal. He was glad, however, he said, that he at least landed in American territory. By so doing he had surpassed the distance made by the German Bremen fliers in the first crossing of the Atlantic in a westward direction by airplane.

Fought Through Fog

The huge plane fought its way to the New Foundland coast through every danger known to airmen. More than one hour they were flying blindly, not knowing where they were or what direction to take. Finally the direction was picked up by the radio. After the plane had reached Harbor Grace it was still so dark that the fliers did not know how to land. A radio message called for plane to come up and guide them down. After this was done they lighted on the field without any difficulty.

Cooper testified he has no recollection of the killing of Hunter. Many well known persons from Mount Pleasant, Tex., where Cooper was born and reared, and from Texarkana were character witnesses.

Campbell Renews Debate Challenge

Invites Robinson, His Opponent, to Meet Him on the Stump

LITTLE ROCK, June 25.—A letter, written to United States Senator Joe F. Robinson by his opponent, Tom W. Campbell, Little Rock lawyer, renewing a challenge to a joint debate, was made public at Mr. Campbell's headquarters Tuesday.

Mr. Campbell enclosed with the letter a list of his speaking engagements from June 30 to July 12 and invited Senator Robinson to meet him at all of them, or on any subsequent speaking dates. "To debate with me the issues of this campaign, and to answer, if you can, the criticisms I am making and shall continue to make of your record in the senate."

The letter said in part:

"I see from the newspapers that since you declined my first invitation to meet me in joint debate, you have had time to leave Washington and make a speech to a few of the lawyers of Arkansas at Fort Smith and to make a speech at a banquet attended by only a few of the wealthy people in Pine Bluff, and to make a speech in Canada. If you continue to refuse to meet me on the stump, I believe the people of this state will be justified in concluding from such action on your part that you cannot defend your record in the Senate. I hope you will accept this invitation, as I believe the people of Arkansas will appreciate an opportunity of hearing us from the same platform."

Former Arkansas Grid Star Is Slain

Was Shot By a Man In Missouri, Later Dying

ARCADEPHIA, June 25.—The Byron Crain of Sikeston, Mo., who died in a Cairo, Ill., hospital from bullet wounds alleged to have been inflicted by Jack L. Morgan, of New Madrid county, Mo., was a star halfback of the Henderson-Brown football team of 1923-1924-1925. Since then, he has been a well known baseball player in Southeast Missouri. Crain was one of the best broken field runners the Reddies ever had in the estimation of local fans, but was kept out of many games because of a knee injury.

The fight which led to Crain's death is said to have started over an argument about the proper parking of Crain's auto. Morgan, who was arrested after the shooting and re-arrested after Crain's death, and whose body was fixed at $5000, claims he shot in self defense after Crain had attacked and beaten him severely. Crain is survived by his widow, his parents and several brothers and sisters.

Our Unofficial Envoys

IT IS rather comforting to read the back-handed slap which Ambassador Dawes recently aimed at those socially ambitious folk who pester American ambassadors abroad with demands that they be presented at court.

Speaking at Cambridge, where he received an honorary degree, the ambassador referred to the Gold Star mothers visiting London as "representatives of the heart and soul of the American people," and added:

"They were not self-invited. They did not come with their minds occupied by thoughts of society reporters or fashionable dressmakers. My proudest hour was when I presented these best representatives of my people to those who represented the British people and the British legion."

If America as a nation is judged in Europe by the Americans who go over there, Europeans sometimes must have a very poor opinion of us. There is nothing especially inspiring about those social climbers who go over, as Ambassador Dawes says, "with their minds occupied by thoughts of society reporters or fashionable dressmakers." Nor are some of the lesser literary lights who flock about Paris any more uplifting to consider.

But we do send over a good many unofficial ambassadors of a better type. There are, for instance, these Gold Star mothers. We can surely be content to have Europe judge us by them. In fact, they probably give a better impression than we, as a nation, deserve.

Nor are these the only ones. There is a small army of American business representatives all over Europe; keen, alert and intelligent, binding the old world to the new with ties of commerce and trade. We shall not fare badly if foreigners gauge America by those people. They are typical of us.

The social climber—generally female—represents only a small class. Her frenzy to kneel before royalty, to enter the homes of Lord Thud and Lady That, is not representative of the nation as a whole.

A Life to Save a Life

An automobile stalled on a Louisiana grade crossing the other way. Down the track came a fast train. The engineer, Leon Ford, saw the stalled car and knew that in the ordinary course of things it would be impossible to stop his train in time to avoid hitting it.

There was just one possibility. When the brakes are jammed on tightly when an engine is traveling at high speed, the engine usually jumps the track and turns over. Engineer Ford decided to risk it. He jammed his brakes on to the limit. The engine left the track, capsized, and Ford was killed. But the motorist's life was saved.

Now this little story, while extremely heartening to read, is not at all surprising; and in the fact that it is not surprising lies the secret of the high regard which the general public feels, and always has felt, for the locomotive engineer. The engineer is a man of whom brave things are expected. That is one of the finest tributes that the public at large can ever pay to any profession or calling.

Probably most of us would like to believe that if we had been in Ford's place we would have done the same thing; but we know, even while we tell ourselves that we would have been brave, that we are kidding ourselves. By the time we could have nerved ourselves to the job it would have been too late. What makes this exploit especially bright was that Ford's action was instinctive. He had no time to think it over. What he did, in that brief moment of decision, depended on the sort of man he was—the ideals that he had, the code of honor that he had built up through his years of service.

There are other professions like that. The sea captain is expected to stay by a sinking ship until the last man has been taken off. The fireman is expected to risk his life in a burning building in order to get helpless people out. The doctor and nurse are expected to minister to the sick with no thought of any risks that they themselves may incur.

It is to the everlasting honor of the human race that there are so many callings in which that high standard is maintained.

The Upswing Is Near

THE monthly business bulletin issued by the Cleveland Trust Company is one of the most sober analytical business and industrial charts now available; and the current issue brings the cheering prediction that the return of prosperity cannot be very far distant.

Pointing out that production has declined more rapidly than consumption, so that shortages are in the making in many important lines, the bulletin says:

"The combined forces of under-production and of abundant credit at low rates are operating to remedy conditions, and to bring about business recovery, as they always do in times like these. Ease of credit facilitates business recovery, and under production compels it. We have both in combination, and confidence that they will be effective in the not distant future is fully justified. All the history of past periods of slow business indicates that the end of this one is approaching."

What Most Every Husband Knows!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—If the white whale which the coast guard ice patrol claims to have seen off the Grand Banks was really Moby Dick, the most famous white whale of all time, the old boy must have degenerated. Moby Dick, the killer, always traveled alone. The coast guard report to the navy's hydrographic office, however, says this white whale was swimming along with a black whale.

It was so long since the Navy Department had heard of a white whale that the people down there put out a bulletin on it when someone discovered a rather casual, routine mention of the phenomenon in the report of Commander F. F. Roach, commanding the cutter Modoc.

Mistook It for Ice Cake

"At 7:15 p. m. on May 16," Roach reported, "a white whale was sighted from the bridge, the ship then being at 42 degrees, 32 minutes north; 46 degrees, 36 minutes west. The white whale was swimming in company with a black one directly for the port bow. At first it was taken for a growler. However, it made two short dives while traversing the distance to the ship and then sounded close aboard and disappeared in company with its black companion. Neither whale was seen again."

A growler is a chunk of an iceberg and the Modoc's position at this memorable moment was about 400 miles southeast of Cape Race, Newfoundland.

Of course there are white whales in existence, but hardly ever does anyone see one of them. There are also whales with large white spots and sometimes these spots grow until they get the better of a black whale and make him all white. Some whales whiten with age.

The ice patrol was not out looking for whales, white or black or spotted. It was looking for ice. In these days of electric refrigerators no one ever sees ice in large pieces after wintertime any more except the ice patrol, so the ice patrol and the hydrographic office to which it reports have an interesting story to tell in addition to the story about the white whale.

Last year the ice patrol came back to shore in August. This year it came back early in June because there was no more ice menacing the steamship tracks. Last year the icebergs began to come down from the north six weeks earlier than this year, however, so the duration of the iceberg season was about the same. Last year had icebergs later in the season than any year since 1912, when the Titanic crashed into a berg in the North Atlantic and went down with a loss of 1517 lives.

There has been an immense increase in trans-Atlantic traffic since that time and the general theory is that there would have been more disasters similar to that of the Titanic if it had not been for the international ice patrol subsequently created. But no one seems to remember any instance since 1912 when an ocean steamer has crashed into a berg.

Forbidden City Will Be Opened

Rare Collection of Art Objects Will Be Seen After Repairs

NEW YORK, June 25.—(UP)—Olin D. Wannamaker, general secretary in America of the Chinese Cultural Foundation, has announced that active work has started in Peiping to put all of the enormous collections of historical and artistic treasures of the Forbidden City, the palaces of the reigning house of China, on exhibition for use of modern observers and students.

Until just 19 years ago none but members of the royal household, ministers of state and those singled out for special honor by the Imperial family was permitted to pass through the gateway entering its walls.

Chinese emperors left one of the most wonderful museums in the world, according to Wannamaker. Greatest treasures of Chinese art were collected by the Emperors. Books, paintings, priceless antiques and other ancient objects of art, offered by the people as tribute to their Emperors during several dynasties, found their way from all parts of the vast empire inside the walls of the Forbidden City, and into one or another of the palatial structures.

The present object is to restore to the Chinese people the objects of art symbolic of the spirit of the Chinese as a race, and to make the great museum the symbol of ancient China for the entire world.

The library contains more than 1,200,000 volumes including the special Imperial Library of 36,000 volumes in manuscript; a special manuscript collection of 11,000 volumes; the Chinese encyclopedia of 5,000 volumes and rare books of the Sung, Yuan and Ming dynasties, from the Tenth through the Sixteenth centuries.

Historical records include practical accounts of the royal household of the emperor, private accounts of the emperor, records of instructions issued by the Emperors, edicts and memorials, budgets of the royal household, maps, portraits, seals and charters, the seals of solid gold or jade.

The picture galleries have 8,000 paintings and specimens of calligraphy, dating from the Tsin dynasty, 2265 A. D. Porcelain pieces to the number of 6,000 represent every family dynasty. A rare collection of jade of our kind from the Sung to the Ming great variety numbering about 100,000 pieces varying in size from several feet in height to a fraction of an inch in diameter.

The forbidden City during the last third of a century has fallen into a state of disrepair. The present movement includes plans for renovating the present buildings housing the treasures, and also erection of buildings to meet the requirements of a modern museum.

As far as possible the plan of the Forbidden City will be left unmodified. Visitors will be able to see how the emperors lived, but palaces in other sections of the city will be turned more completely into general museums and art galleries.

China already has provided considerable funds for the work and through deep interest taken by Americans in Chinese culture many have taken an active part in preservation of the finest relics of ancient China as housed in the Palace Museum at Peiping, Wannamaker said.

Iceland Ready For Big Birthday Fete

1000 Anniversary Expected to Draw 50,000 Visitors

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, June 25.—(UP)—After a year's preparation the stage is set for celebration of the 1,000th birthday of Iceland's parliament, which starts tomorrow morning.

For three whole days the entire island republic with its population of 100,000 augmented, it is expected, by half as many more visitors, will be en fete.

Two canvas cities have sprung up on the plains of Thingvellir, where, according to tradition, the Althing or parliament, the oldest in the world, was first held, and on the shores of Lake Reykjavik.

Miles and miles of snow-white tents in ordinary array glisten in the spring sunshine, many of them already occupied by tourists from all parts of the world, who have come to participate in the celebrations.

Special arrangements have been made for the three royal personages who are expected to grace the proceedings with their presence.

It is certain that King Christian, as king of the united Iceland-Denmark, will be present. He is to deliver a speech from the place where the Icelandic chief, a thousand years ago addressed his company of Norwegian emigrants.

King Christian owns a farm on the plain of Thingvellir, and will live in the farm house during his stay in Iceland. The building is of recent date.

Many 'Ton Litter' Broods In County

Contest Is Being Pushed In Hempstead County This Year

The "Ton Litter" contest is being pushed in Hempstead county this year in an effort to increase the use of a certain supplement in feeding out hogs and thereby reduce the production cost. Corn seed meal is the cheapest source of protein in the south, and since hogs need protein for proper development this cheap product may be used more judiciously. Those who are entered in the contest are feeding out corn seed meal according to a schedule which has been carefully worked out by the Livestock Specialist of the University of M. W. Muldrow. Prizes are being offered in the state by the Cotton Seed Crushers Association and by the Temple Cotton Oil Co. of this city. Feeding rules have been furnished all the entries in this contest. The contest closes June 15. Following are the names of those who have entered: Date of Farrow, April 30—Stoman, Goodlett (4-H Club) Ozan, pigs 7, Poland China. Date of Farrow, May 13—Elmer, Orlin, Fulton, pigs 11, Poland China. Date of Farrow, June 10—Frank, Schooley, Hope route 4, pigs 7, Poland China. Date of Farrow, June 11—K. B. It should be kept in mind that the final score is not determined so much by the number of pigs in the litter since the average weight per pig counts 50 per cent. The litter must weigh 2,000 pounds in 180 days after farrowing.

Wife Killer Is Denied Bond

Sons of Man Tell of the Killing At Their Home, June 11

EL DORADO, June 25.—(P)—Charged with shooting his wife, Stella, to death at their home near Strong, Union county, June 11 because she had started divorce proceedings against him, Schuller Webb, 45, wealthy farmer, was today bound over to the grand jury without bond.

After he had shot his wife Webb turned the gun on himself in an effort to end his own life. Two shots were fired into his breast. Today at the trial he was so weak from the effect of these shots that he had to be helped to the court room by two deputies.

The only witnesses at the trial were Homer, 17, and Harvey, 9, sons of the man. The elder son showed strong feeling against the man throughout the trial and referred to him as Mr. Webb.

Harvey, the smaller boy said he was awakened by hearing a shot. The first he saw was his father bending over the prostrate form of his mother. The boy said his father then turned the gun on himself and fired three times.

Wadley Fails To Pay Filing Fee

Oversight Results in His Name Being Left Off the Ticket

TEXARKANA, June 25.—The author of Arkansas's first primary election was a victim Tuesday of the statute which superseded it.

J. L. Wadley, Sr., former legislator and newspaper publisher, will be left off the ticket as a candidate for representative from Miller county because he failed to pay his filing fee prior to midnight Monday.

S. C. Nancarrow, chairman of the county democratic central committee, advised Wadley Tuesday morning there was nothing the committee could do about it. B. F. Arnold and J. D. Ellis are the remaining candidates. However, voters may write Wadley's name on the ballots if they desire, his friends said.

When the veteran newspaper man, well known over Arkansas, was serving in the house of representatives from Garland county in 1895, he introduced the first bill governing party primaries. This was aimed exclusively at frauds and abuses of the ballot, and did not undertake to set up machinery to guide the holding of the elections, as did the Brundage act, passed a few years later.

"I haven't read the Brundage act in 18 years," the late candidate said Tuesday. "I had filed my corrupt practices pledge and my pledge to support the primary nominees, and was waiting to learn the fees that had been assessed. It was not until today I found they had been fixed several

Sulphur Tests To Insure Quality...

This photograph, taken in the laboratories of one of the great "Standard" Refineries, shows how samples from still-runs of "Standard" Improved Gasoline are subjected to a corrosion test, in order to be sure that they are free from sulphur compounds which will corrode the motor. The test consists in immersing a strip of copper in "Standard" Improved Gasoline, heating it to 122°F., and keeping it at this temperature for three hours. At the end of that time, the copper strip must have retained its bright color or the gasoline from that still-run must be re-treated.

Such painstaking care, such scientific methods, such refining experience, equipment, and personnel, guarantee the quality of every gallon of "Standard" Improved Gasoline you put into your fuel tank. Why take chances with no-name "bootleg" fuels, when you can buy the gasoline of undisputed superiority at a nearby service station, identified by the bars and-circle trade mark?

Already the United States open champion, he now is the only golfer ever to have held three major links titles at the same time.
